

Landmarks Curriculum Sequencing - Personal Development

Intent – What is Landmarks aiming to achieve through its Personal Development curriculum?

- To facilitate opportunities for learners to develop independence at home, college and in the community enabling them to gain confidence in their abilities, build mental resilience and to engage in activities safely in all environments
- To develop learners to be responsible, respectful and active citizens who are able to participate in public life
- To develop learners' understanding of the fundamental British Values of democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty, mutual respect, and tolerance
- To promote the equality of opportunity so that all learners can thrive together, understanding that differences are a positive
- To develop learners' character, in order to foster qualities needed to flourish in society such as behaving with integrity and working well with others
- To develop learners' confidence, resilience and knowledge to support mental wellbeing
- To develop learners' understanding of physical health and maintaining an active lifestyle
- To develop an understanding of healthy relationships, including appropriate sex and relationships education
- To support learners' readiness for the next phase of their education, training, or future endeavours.

Implementation – How is the Landmarks' Personal Development curriculum delivered?

- Personal development opportunities will be embedded into sessions and recreational activities allowing learners to develop transferable skills and to practise these new skills to build confidence
- Personal development will be embedded throughout the curriculum, not just as part of timetabled sessions; or for example, learners have the opportunity to engage with enrichment and extra-curricular activities such as The Archer Disco to support their development, and all curriculum areas have considered how their subject area will promote personal development
- British Values will be naturally embedded into delivery, for example through providing learners with choice and voting on group decisions. British Values will be discussed with learners as appropriate to their level, for example by considering topical news articles and discussing their views on this

- Equality will be embedded through the opportunities provided to learners; differences will be discussed, and tolerance will be promoted so that learners understand that differences are a positive. Protected characteristics will be discussed with learners as appropriate to their level
- National events and awareness days will be addressed in personal development sessions in a way that raises awareness, promotes discussion, allows learners to debate topics, share their opinions, and ultimately promote equality and diversity
- The curriculum is divided into phases, recognising that all learners will progress throughout the curriculum at different rates; topics will be covered in a way that offers stretch and challenge to learners to support the development of skills related to personal development
- Opportunities to expand on personal development will be included as part of the session, for example developing a learner's independence and confidence through community access
- A continuous range of formative and summative assessment methods are used to assess progress towards Recognising and Recording Progress, Achievement and Destinations (RARPAD) targets and any qualifications that are completed as part of the session.

Impact – What difference is the Personal Development curriculum making for learners?

- Learners will feel confident in making decisions, trying out new opportunities and will build mental resilience and positive outlooks
- Learners will understand how to keep themselves safe
- Learners will display the fundamental British Values through their behaviour and attitudes, ultimately displaying characteristics that will support them to flourish as part of society
- Learners will demonstrate equality and diversity through their ability to recognise and appreciate differences, and through their mutual respect and tolerance of others
- Learners will understand the importance of being healthy and be able to apply principles of this to their lifestyles, including knowledge of sex and relationships appropriate to their understanding
- Learners will meet or exceed expected progress in relation to RARPAD targets set against the Good Health, and Friends, Relationships and Community 'Preparation for Adulthood' themes
- Learners will be prepared for the next phase of their education, training, or future endeavours.
